Meet Our Family Medicine Residents

Noah Rapp, DO Class of 2029

ABOUT ME

Hi! My name is Noah Rapp, and I was born and raised in Mt. Vernon, Indiana. I am excited to continue my medical education at Deaconess, so close to the community that shaped me. After graduating from Mt. Vernon Senior High School, I attended Wabash College, where I majored in Biology. I then went on to earn my medical degree from Marian University College of Osteopathic Medicine in Indianapolis. The experiences that have most shaped the physician I aspire to be include my time volunteering with Posey County Special Olympics, working with the Crawfordsville Narcotics Anonymous community, and interning at the Posey County Health Department. These experiences deepened my understanding of disparities within healthcare and taught me the importance of empathy, active listening, and patience.

WHY CHOOSE DEACONESS?

I am thrilled to join the Deaconess Family Medicine Residency Program, the same program my father was trained at over 20 years ago. I had the opportunity to rotate with the program during my fourth year of medical school, and I was struck by how welcoming, supportive, and passionate the residents, faculty, and staff were toward both patient care and medical education. Combined with the chance to be close to my wife's and my families and friends, choosing this program was an easy decision.

HOBBIES/INTERESTS

Outside of medicine, I enjoy spending time with my friends and family. I like to unwind by playing video games, going to the gym, and taking walks with my wife and our dogs, Nala and Bruno. I am a lifelong Colts fan, a Marvel movie enthusiast, and I enjoy exploring new recipes and wines. I look forward to meeting and getting to know you!
